Workshop on banking and banking regulation
Call for papers

Date	17–18 November 2026
Venue	Bank for International Settlements, Representative Office, Hong Kong SAR
Format	In general physical

The objectives of the Basel Committee's Research Group suggest that to further the goals of the Committee, the Research Group will seek to expand and facilitate communication among economists at member institutions and in academia working on supervisory and financial stability issues. An important component of the group's mission is to communicate the practical implications of its projects and activities to the Committee.

Therefore, in addition to its annual academic conference, the Research Group is conducting a workshop to discuss early-stage research in the field of banking and notably banking regulation. The goals are to inform members of the group about recent developments in research relevant for Basel Committee work and to give authors feedback on their work.

All papers shall be discussed by another submitting author or a participating member of the Research Group.

Papers can be submitted by authors from Basel Committee or Research Group member institutions, as well as by staff of other central banks or supervisory authorities. Participation is limited to presenters, discussants and Research Group members. Papers should not yet be under review by an academic journal. Costs will not be reimbursed.

Submissions should be sent by 31 August 2026 to the Secretariat (martin.birn@bis.org). Authors will receive an acceptance notification by end of September 2026.

The workshop shall foster a discussion among participants. Therefore, physical participation is strongly encouraged. A limited number of dial-in slots will be made available, if necessary.
